Jumper next chief of staff

Master Sgt. Rick Burnham
Air Force Print News

WASHINGTON — Gen. John Jumper, commander of Air Combat Command, was confirmed by the Senate Aug. 3 to be the Air Force's next chief of staff. Jumper was nominated by the president in July to succeed Gen. Michael Ryan who retires in September.

During the confirmation hearings, the general answered questions ranging from B-2 bomber upgrades to Air Force family members using GI Bill educational benefits.

He said his priorities for the force in the coming years would mirror those of Secretary of Defense Donald Rumsfeld and Secretary of the Air Force James Roche.

Percival will pass the USFORAZ and 65th ABW guidons representing the two chains at Lajes Field.

He is leaving Lajes for Nellis Air Force Base, Nev., where he will be the new range wing commander. The new commander comes from Aviano Air Base, Italy, where she was commander of the 31st Logistics Group.

She has served in various aircraft maintenance and staff positions including Officer in Charge of Aircraft Maintenance Units in Tactical Air Command and staff officer for the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics, Headquarters United States Air Forces Europe.

She also commanded the 46th Component Repair Squadron and the 46th Equipment Maintenance Squadron at the Air Force Development Test Center in Air Force Materiel Command and served as the special assistant for depot, readiness and logistics programs in the Office of Legislative Liaison, Secretary of the Air Force, at the Pentagon.

She is accompanied at Lajes by her husband Chuck Fix, a retired Air Force lieutenant colonel, and her son, Adam.

Since driving into the area will be restricted, a base shuttle will run from 8:20-9:20 a.m. to take people to the ceremony. Pickup locations are: Bldg. T-100 (northwest entrance), theater, Bldg. T-216, base clinic (ambulance side), civil engineer compound, and the passenger terminal.

Uniform of the day for this mandatory formation, is short-sleeve, open-collar Air Force blues or service equivalent.

If the weather is bad, the ceremony will be held in the Chace Fitness Center gym.

All members of Team Lajes are inited to attend the post-reception and welcome the new commander and her family, starting at 11:30 at the Top of the Rock Club ballroom.

Ceremony Protocol

During the ceremony, the U.S. and Portuguese national anthems will be played.

Everyone in attendance should rise and face the direction of the music. Uniformed military members should render a salute for both anthems.

Civilians should remove their hats and stand with their right hand over their heart. Civilian women may do the same or stand with both hands at their sides.

Personal honors will be played for the Joint Forces commander. Military members should render a salute when they hear Ruffles and Flourishes. Civilians may show respect by standing,

Col. Judith Fedder

Receiving Line Protocol

Teams to spread word on AEF improvements

Master Sgt. Terry Somerville
Air Combat Command Public Affairs

LANGLEY AIR FORCE BASE, Va. (ACCNS) — Coming soon to a big room near you: everything you want or need to know about Aerospace Expeditionary Force deployments.

Briefing teams from the AEF Center are hitting the road to visit Air Force bases around the world, including Air Force Reserve and Air National Guard units.

They'll spread the word on improvements in AEF Cycle 3, answer questions, and get ideas from people on improvements to the AEF process.

Plans call for the briefers to be on the road through the end of September. However, the dates for Lajes haven't been released yet. The Crossroads newspaper will publicize the dates when they become available.

Each base will hold one or more mass briefings in a location like a base theater. The two- or three-person briefing teams will also be available to talk to smaller groups, like wing or group staff meetings or squadron get-togethers.

"Not everyone knows what they need to know about the AEF," said Maj. Michael Knight, a space-operations specialist in the AEF Center who will be one of the first people on the road.

For instance, AEF Cycle 3, which begins in March 2002, will feature a 'team' concept, where a base will provide a large number of people for one or two AEF deployments, instead of small groups of people throughout the cycle. That will change the impact that AEF deployments have on individual bases and units.

The briefing teams also want to let people know about the amazing range of information available on the World Wide Web. "EAF Online" provides position-specific information for deploying people, like "What will my duties be?" and "What training and equipment do I need?"

The Web site lets commanders track the readiness status of all their people.

The site "started two years ago as an idea on a chalkboard," Knight said. "It's continually being improved."

EAF Online can be accessed from computers in the dot-mil and dot-gov domains at <https://aefcenter.acc.af.mil>.

Another site with information on the AEF concept that is open to everybody is at <http://aefc.langley.af.mil>.

Going to every base to talk about AEF changes lets the AEF specialists field questions from the audience.

"If we don't know the answer, we'll be able to call back (to the AEF Center) and we can put all our resources to work to answer it," said Lt. Col. Jeff Urie, a special-operations specialist and another of the briefers.

Urie is sure the briefers won't know all the answers.

"There's no such thing as an AEFologist," he said. "What we have here (in the AEF Center) is a representation of the Air Force — people who cover almost every area of expertise."

The briefers invite questions from bases before they get there so they can tailor presentations for each base. Each base has a person scheduling a team who can pass questions on to the briefing team.

The briefings are open to everyone at a base to attend. However, the unit commanders will know best who needs to get the latest word on the AEF process.

"There's no such thing as an AEFologist," he said. "What we have here (in the AEF Center) is a representation of the Air Force — people who cover almost every area of expertise."

"I intend to follow the objectives put forth by Secretary Rumsfeld and Secretary Roche that include transformation, readiness, retention and recapitalization," he said.

"Transformation is, and always will be, a key issue because the Air Force is inherently transformational — constantly adapting ourselves to new threats and leveraging new technology in order to posture ourselves to face the challenges of an uncertain future," he said. "Our greatest challenge remains the requirement to advance new capabilities while maintaining the robust readiness required to meet day-to-day warfighter requirements."

"It is imperative we develop our Global Strike Task Force, a kick-down-the-door force that will assure access and aerospace dominance for all our joint forces."

The general said being ready to kick down the door if and when the requirement comes to do so is critical to any combat force.

"Readiness is the heart and soul of our ability to perform our mission on a day-to-day basis, and is the hallmark of our combat capability," he said. "Our overall Air Force readiness is lower than any time since June 1987. We are capable of winning today, but we're concerned about trends in readiness indicators such as aging aircraft, constrained resources and parts, and retention."

Improved retention rates, said Jumper, are key to the future of the Air Force.

"People are our most vital resource," he said. "We can only be successful through the energy and dedication of skilled and motivated personnel."

The general said today's airmen, particularly second-term and career airmen, have been overtasked for a number of years.

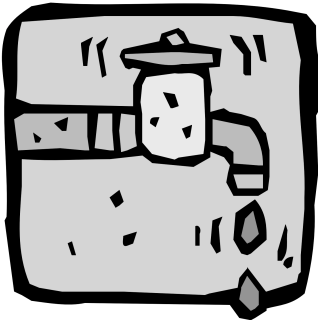

"These airmen are the backbone of our enlisted force," he said. "They endure the increased load of having to train our new accessions plus carry out the day-to-day work required of experienced technicians."

"Wages, the high-operations tempo, quality-of-life issues and leadership are key issues our people consider when making the decision to reenlist," he said. "More must be done to improve not only quality of life for airmen, but also quality of service."

This is why recapitalization is a key issue to today's Air Force, Jumper said.

"Quality of life issues are terribly important to attract and retain great people, but so is quality of service," he said. "Quality of service addresses the need to ensure we give our airmen the proper tools to do the tough jobs we ask them to do."

"We must recover from a decade-long spending hiatus to provide the tools our airmen need to fly, fight and win. Therefore, I will ensure an effective balance between quality of life and modernization spending is maintained."

Water Saving Tips

- Make sure your home is leak free.
- Report all significant water losses (broken pipes, open hydrants, errant sprinklers, abandoned free-flowing wells, etc.) to the civil engineer customer service at 2-3335. If your faucet is dripping at a rate of one drop per second, you can expect to waste 2,700 gallons per year.
- Operate automatic dishwashers and clothes washers only when you have a full load. Set the water level for the size of load you are using if the machine has different settings.
- Don't let water run while shaving. Brush your teeth first while waiting for water to get hot, then wash or shave after filling the sink.
- Don't over-water your lawn. Normally, lawns only need watering every five to seven days in the summer and every 10 to 14 days in the winter. A strong rain eliminates the need for watering for about two weeks.
- Don't let sprinklers water the street, driveway or sidewalk. Position them so water lands on the lawn and shrubs.
- Use a broom to clean leaves and other debris from driveways and sidewalks. Don't hose them down.
- Use a shut-off nozzle on your hose that can be adjusted to a fine spray. This way, water flows only as needed. When finished, make sure to turn it off at the faucet.
- Don't leave sprinklers or hoses unattended. A garden hose can pour out 450 gallons or more in about an hour. Use a kitchen timer so you don't forget to turn them off.
- Encourage friends and neighbors to conserve.

Water source of concern at Lajes

Staff Sgt. Beverly Isik
Public affairs

Being surrounded by water, it may be hard for some people to understand how Lajes could be challenged with ways to save it. Figure in about 40 inches of rainfall that's dumped on Terceira each year, and it may be more difficult to understand.

But in recent months, Lajes has gone from using about 400,000 gallons to as much as 650,000-1,000,000 gallons each day, according to Col. Auston Smith, 65th Support Group commander.

The water treatment plant can produce a maximum of 695,000 gallons of potable water daily and was running 24 hours a day to keep up with the increase. The plant uses well water to produce treated water and needs 1,000,000 gallons of well water to make 650,000 gallons of purified water.

"When we started looking at the increased usage, we drove through housing and found nearly 20 homes with the sprinklers running long after duty hours," said Tech. Sgt. Jeremy Kitzhaber, NCO in charge of utilities.

To help curb usage, base officials implemented a water conservation policy July 31, limiting the days and times housing residents can water lawns.

People who live in odd-numbered houses are allowed to water their lawns from 6-8 a.m. and 6-8 p.m. on odd days. Those in even-numbered houses should observe the same hours on even days.

"On average, a garden hose will use about 420 gallons of water per hour," the colonel said. "If everyone collectively reduced lawn water usage by a total of 200 hours a day, we can save nearly 100,000 gallons a day."

Although watering lawns is not the primary cause of the increase seen over the past few months, it's an unnecessary factor.

"It's not the sole culprit by any means, but it's still a good chunk that doesn't need to be used," Kitzhaber said. "Our water is purified at such a high level there are few minerals left by the time it hits the lawn."

Grass needs minerals to flourish, and since the water produced on base is extremely low in mineral content, Kitzhaber said people who water their lawns for long periods of time aren't going to get greener grass. He recommends using commercial nutrients in addition to the water conservation plan.

Since the conservation policy was implemented, usage is down by about 40,000 gallons each day, according to Kitzhaber.

"We should be using a little more than 100 gallons per person each day," he said. "But we're cranking out about 225 gallons."

Civil engineers have also been investigating possible water line leaks and checking out storm drains throughout the base on dry days, and doing walk-through inspections of more than 400 facilities, he said.

"That takes time, so we need everyone's help," Kitzhaber said. "People should report any leaks to CE customer service as soon as possible."

To report a leak, call 2-3335.
